Cargill's antibiotic-free facility presentation scheduled for Wednesday at 11:00 a.m. at booth A2557

MINNEAPOLIS – (January 7, 2019) — Attendees at this year's International Production and Processing Expo (IPPE) can be the first to get an inside look at Cargill's new animal feed facility in Ohio via a virtual reality tour available daily at the Cargill booth, A2557. In addition, the new facility, known as Lewisburg West, will be showcased during a presentation in the booth on Wednesday, February 13 at 11:00 am. Cargill's new, 220,000 square foot premix and nutrition plant will be the first-of-its-kind, dedicated to manufacturing non-medicated and antibiotic-free animal nutrition products for current and prospective U.S. customers. The plant will be fully operational by fall 2019.

"The new facility will bring several benefits to our customers, including automation which will increase accuracy of feed production and traceability of ingredients as well as lower risks to product quality," said Jack O'Connor, associate engineer, Cargill. O'Connor will be giving the presentation on the new plant at IPPE.

Lewisburg West will contain four production lines which will produce roughly 86,000 tons of non-medicated animal nutrition products per year. This state-of-the-art manufacturing technology also will increase employee safety.

The Lewisburg West plant will support Cargill's Provimi brand of animal nutrition premixes and products, along with additives and specialty and custom blends. Cargill's existing facility, Lewisburg East, will be dedicated to producing medicated products that are important to maintaining the health and well-being of livestock and poultry.

The Lewisburg West facility joins six other Cargill premix feed and nutrition manufacturing facilities across the U.S in Guymon, OK; Hereford, TX; Weatherford, TX; Fremont, NE; and Lewisburg, OH. To learn more about the new plant or other Provimi capabilities, please visit booth A2557.
